

A man is being interrogated by an investigator.

A: I already told you it wasn't me. I have no idea who did it. I'm innocent.

B: Ok, so where were you last Saturday evening at around 7pm?

A: I was watching movie. Swear!

B: Do you have an alibi?

A: Definitely! I was with my girlfriend. You can ask her if you want. She can assure you that I was with her when the crime happened.

B: John William is your girlfriend's former boyfriend, right? We have eyewitnesses that are willing to testify that they saw both of you having a heated argument at the gym few hours before he was killed.

A: Yeah sure. We had misunderstanding about some petty things but that was nothing serious. As I told you, I went out with my girlfriend that day to watch Indiana Jones.

B: Alright, but I'm sure that you'll be curious enough to know that Indiana Jones movie stopped playing last Friday.

A: uh...uhm... I don't want to answer any more questions until my lawyer gets here.

B: That's the smartest idea you've said this afternoon.

VOCABULARY WORDS

Interrogate – examine by asking questions

Alibi – (Law) someone who attempts to prove that suspect was elsewhere when the crime in question was committed.

Assure – to make sure

Eyewitness – someone who actually saw the incident

Testify – to express a strong belief

ACTIVITY

Pretend to be a judge. Make a decision out of the following situations.

- 1) A man is late for an important meeting at work. If he doesn't get there on time, he will lose an important client. He gets pulled over by the police for over speeding and running a red light.
- 2) After pushing in front of a pregnant woman to get a seat on a crowded subway, a drunken middle-aged man gets into a fight with a young guy who criticizes him. The drunkard gets a good beating from the younger, stronger man and ends up in the hospital for two days.